

ADEE Update & People Management

Aula Parva Central Building
Vilnius University

23rd August 2017

Introduction

The Dean as a Motivating Manager - Insights on People Management

Managing people can be one of the most rewarding but also difficult tasks of a Dean. While far from being exact science, people management can be mastered through self-awareness and gaining a good understanding of individuals' motivations and drivers and by consistently applying a set of universal principles.

In this interactive and practical session, Alex will share a concrete approach to people management. He will expand on key attitudes and skills needed and will facilitate experience sharing, individual and group interaction, to help participants apply these in concrete situations that might appear in their day to day work as leaders of dental schools.

Your facilitator: Alex Selwood

Alex is an exceptional and passionate facilitator specialised in leadership, management skills training and business coaching. He has a unique, high energy and empathetic facilitation style.

Alex truly believes in taking a group or an individual through a learning experience, and then seeing them behave differently to the benefit of themselves and their profession. His leadership is combined with a pragmatic approach to implementing new skills and processes in the workplace.

His training and coaching programs always make a significant difference to individuals and their organizations, empowering board level to graduate entry, across a wide variety of business sectors.

Alex has previously facilitated highly appreciated sessions with the FEHDD, the most recent being in Barcelona, Spain in 2016.
